Your opinion counts

This survey is for people affected by liver cirrhosis, their loved ones, carers and healthcare professionals. What do you think are the most important questions where research on liver cirrhosis should focus?

Please spare 10 minutes to do this short survey to suggest the research needed to improve care and treatment for liver cirrhosis. Please share your questions, regardless of how important or trivial you may think they are.

Who's behind the survey?

A group of patients, care givers, healthcare professionals and researchers, deeply committed to advancing liver disease research. The project is a collaboration between the James Lind Alliance, UK CLIF Network and the British Liver Trust.

Why this is important

Liver cirrhosis is the name for the advanced stage of liver disease. While many people with liver cirrhosis can lead a normal life, it can be a serious condition that is life limiting for some.

Cases of liver disease are increasing in the UK and although a lot of research is being done, we have not developed a new treatment for liver cirrhosis in the last 20 years.

What happens with the survey results?

The results will be shared with researchers, research funders and others working with people affected by liver cirrhosis.

What do I have to do?

Think about what you would like to see answered by research into liver cirrhosis. In your own words and using your own experiences, tell us what is important to you.

We're looking for survey responses from patients and carers, we welcome all views.

Your questions about liver cirrhosis

What questions do you have about liver cirrhosis?

Research could look into:

- Diagnosis
- Symptoms and symptom control
- Treatment and care
- Other aspects of liver cirrhosis

*E.g. For diabetes someone might write:
What sort of exercise is likely to be helpful to stop diabetes symptoms getting worse?*
